The present disclosure relates to a light emitting device and a method for manufacturing the light emitting device. More specifically, the present disclosure relates to a light emitting device and a method for manufacturing the light emitting device, in which the light emitting device is capable of emitting white light by combining a plurality of light emitting units that emit light of a different color. Light emitting devices such as LED lighting devices and laser diodes (LD) have been actively developed. In general, such a light emitting device is formed by mounting a semiconductor light emitting device on a lead frame, and electrically connecting the semiconductor light emitting device to an external power source through the lead frame. A representative example of such a semiconductor light emitting device is a light emitting diode (LED). When the light emitting diode is used as a light source of a lighting apparatus, the light emitted from the light emitting diode needs to be emitted in desired directions. To achieve this, the light emitting diode 09e8f5149f

Omicron Ceti Omicron Ceti (o Ceti, o Ceti) is the Bayer designation for a star in the constellation Cetus, located roughly from the Earth. It is a yellow-hued star of visual magnitude 4.7, and spectral class G1.5 Va, meaning that it is cooler and less luminous than the Sun. The star has a surface temperature of 5,967 K, and is approximately 200 million years old. It is a mild candidate for a flare star, and may even be a cataclysmic variable with an orbital period of 48 minutes. Discovery Omicron Ceti was first recorded as an entry in Richard Hinrichsen's Star Catalogue in 1899. It was rediscovered by Wilhelm Olbers in 1834, by William Herschel in 1834, and by William Lassell in 1847. Its status as a Ceti variable star was discovered by Johannsen and Leal. Properties Omicron Ceti is a mild super-flare star. It has a high rate of X-ray emissions, even more so than the Sun, which may be a flare activity at a period of 48 minutes in an Active Sun-like star. The star is a mild cataclysmic variable, with a period of 0.2 hours and a mean luminosity varying between.
