It has a unique identifier called a `_layer name_`, which you use to group its contents, making it easier to manage. It has a `_fill_` and a `_mask_` layer. Each of these layers can be either transparent or opaque. Layers play an important role in Photoshop. You can manipulate multiple layers in a group, but you can also work in a single layer. Each layer can be filled with a variety of colors, gradients, and other effects. You can manipulate the opacity, brightness, and transparency of any layer, including a `_mask_` layer, by using the toolbar and keyboard shortcuts. ## Layers and the Layers Panel The Layers Panel, shown in Figure 11-1, represents the layers of a document. You can add, edit, and remove layers by using the Layers Panel. In some ways, the Layers Panel is similar to Microsoft Word's `_Formatting toolbar_` (where you can format text). The Formatting toolbar is used to modify formatting such as the font, paragraph, and indentation for a selected block of text. The Formatting toolbar works on a single document, but the Layers Panel is used for individual layers. FIGURE 11-1: The Layers Panel is where you can view, organize, and manage Photoshop's layers. You can use the Layers panel to work with the entire document or edit an individual layer. The latter method is similar to working with an individual photo in Windows Photo Gallery. To access the Layers panel, on the Layers panel menu, click the New Layers button, shown in the margin. After the new layer is created, you see the New Layer dialog box, shown in Figure 11-2. FIGURE 11-2: Use this dialog box to rename a new layer. If you click OK in the New Layer dialog box, a new folder is created and a new layer is inserted into the document and named. If you click Cancel, nothing is created. (Find out more about the New Layer dialog box in the later section "Creating a New Layer.") After you create a new layer, you see an icon in the Layers panel in the margin. You can group the new layer with one or more other layers by

What's New In?

There are hundreds of different websites out there, and almost all of them are the same in the fact that they all perform the same functions. Take a look below at five of them that are doing it differently. The Conversations What is a conversation website? Well, it's basically a web platform that allows you to make a conversation or forum for an event on a website. The best thing about a conversation website is that you can use it in a way that works for you. Let me explain that. I've been working with many clients to build conversation websites for their companies. They have a different business, but the essential idea is that they want to make their business more attractive to their customer's. They want to get feedback from them directly. These are, to a certain extent, the same thing as social media. You start out by talking about something to your friends and strangers, and then see where it goes. It's a conversation that can continue for months. The problem is that a conversation website is not necessarily a good tool for all businesses. In order for it to work, you really have to have something to talk about. And it has to be something that is a conversation starter. People don't care about yours and your business, except for some cases. It's a simple enough concept, and it has a lot of potential. It's Not Twitter First off, Twitter is not a conversation website. It's a social platform. It's not as much of a conversation as a communication, but it's still a conversation. I think you need to have a different mindset when you are using the tool. Twitter is a little bit of a turn-key application. It can do a lot of things for you, but the real power is in creating a simple concept that can reach a lot of people. You use it a little bit like Facebook, so you can't really count on people coming back. Twitter is a little bit of a social experiment, whereas a conversation website is more useful for establishing an online reputation. It might help you to make a decision, but is also a sales tool in its own way. What Is it then? If you go to a website like Craigslist and search for "best website," you'll find a lot of different ideas. Some of them look like they work really well,
